France Strives To Rescue Reform From Labor Unrest

Rail Workers Reject Government Overture As Walkouts Escalate

> By William Drozdiak Washington Post Service

PARIS - Faced with the worst bout of labor unrest in nearly a decade, Prime Minister Alain Juppé struggled Tuesday to salvage his ambitious plan to overhaul France's welfare system amid signs that the escalating strikes are inflicting serious damage to the world's fourth-biggest economy. For the fifth day in a row, the country's public transport network was paralyzed as bus, train and Métro services were canceled by striking rail unions. Work in many other sectors was disrupted as employees were stranded at home or stuck in traffic jams 30 kilometers (20 miles) long. [French rail workers said Tuesday night that they had decided to continue their strike, Reuters reported. "The strike continues tomorrow," a union delegate said after nearly five hours of talks with officials of the state railroad company SNCF. Strikes were also Paris-area Métro and the city's buses.

[Transportation Minister Bernard Pons had indicated some flexibility on a fiveyear plan to restore the heavily indebted railroad. But he left the door open to changes in the railroad workers' retirement plan, which the labor unions see as a central issue in the dispute.]

The government insists it cannot afford to back down or else one of Europe's most generous social security systems would soon be driven into bankruptcy. The aus-terity plan is intended to rein in public deficits within the next two years so that France can satisfy the criteria established for a single European currency. But ever since Mr. Juppé unveiled his package of reforms two weeks ago, angry rumhlings in the streets have grown loader. Besides the chaos in public transport, France's five million civil servants have twice gone on strike to protest sacrifices in their pension program. Students also have been staging protests

The president told a national television audience that without American troops to help enforce the U.S.-brokered peace agreement, "the slaughter of innocents will begin again."

Turkmen Fall Under the Sway of Personality Cult

By Alessandra Stanley New York Times Service

SHKHABAD, Turkmenistan --High-stepping soldiers and twirling children in native costume marched in tight formation past the balcony of their leader, chanting his name and brandishing his portrait.

In a national day parade five years ago, they would bave held up Lenin's image. Now, it is the plump, somber face of Turkmenistan's president, Saparmurad A. Niyazov, who has restyled himself Turkmenbashi, or "leader of the Turkmens." His portrait graces every parade float, hotel, office building and park podesial in the country.

Only four years after claiming independence from Moscow, this Central Asian republic rich in oil and natural gas is under the powerful sway of a new kind of personality cult, one that blends the classic Communist model of Lenin and Mao with the opulent grandeur of the medieval caliphates. As planes begin their descent to the modern airport named after him, flight attendants recite the pledge of allegiance: "Let my tongue fall out if I betray my fatherland." The "Sayings of Turkmenbashi" are memorized in every school and university. Government officials wear tiny gold pins of his profile in their lapels and sometimes kiss his jeweled hand. At the recent unveiling of a French-built

$100-million mosque, named Turkmenbashi, President Niyazov was presented with a giant carpet with his face woven large into the foreground of the holy site.

In an interview, Mr. Niyazov said he felt that the personality cult bad gone too far. "I admit it, there are too many portraits, pictures, and monuments," he said. "I doo't find any pleasure in it, but the people demand it because of their mentality. Turkmenistan, a desert country of 4.2 million people, holds the world's fourth-largest reserves of natural gas. Its oil reserves, mostly untapped, are vast. For 800 years, it was a land of nomadic borsemen and their camels; oow it is a modern state of grandiose new government buildings and grating poverty on the streets below. And all of it is controlled by Mr. Niyazov, 55, who was the Communist Party leader in the Soviet era and who moved swiftly to retain the reins of power wheo the Soviet Union collapsed in 1991,

It was then that Mr. Niyazov began his spending spree. He oow has several presidential palaces spread across the republic and two lavish estates oo the edges of the capital: a white palace built by a Turkish company soon after independence, and a newer, sprawling, pink Italian-built mansion.

French architects are oow designing for him a vast $100-millioo gold-domed, white marble presidential palacein the ceoter of town. Mr. Niyazov said that his many palaces were imposed on him from below. "All I wanted was a small, cozy house," he said, but

Parliament overruled him. So far, the republic's expectations of fantastic wealth have not materialized. Russia still 1993 has diverted gas to other former Soviet republics like Ukraine and Georgia, which canis a state-controlled economy. Mr. Niyazov says he will move his country toward a free market and democracy, only slowly. "Our society is not yet mature enough for a civilized multiparty system," be said. "There are no people psy-chologically or financially prepared to become owners of big factories."

He is unimpressed by Western models,

"We shall conduct reforms, but oot by copying what you have in America, all that sexual stuff," be said. "If I allowed all those sexual shows on TV or the newspapers, the people would stone me."

The United States has kept Turkmenistan and its neighbor. Uzbekistan, at arm's length, concerned about their burnan rights abuses and changeable business climates. President Bill Clintoo refused to meet with Mr. Niyazov when be went to the United States in 1993. Exxon and Uoocal recently signed ambitious pipeline construction agreements with Turkmenistan, but aside from those far-off projects, there has been little U.S. or European investment.

It was in the expectation of bordes of Westem businessmeo that Mr. Niyazov ordered the reation of Berzene and business center outside Ashkhabad. In the middle of a harsb desert, 22 five-star botels lie in a shimmering row, most of them empty.

Everything is imported, from Pierre Cardin bathroom tiles to porcini mushrooms.

"Said Makzat, 22, a but it has gotten harder," said Makzat, 22, a melon farmer in a desert village 160 kilometers (100 miles) from the capital.

Turkmenistan is one of the region's top cotton producers, but cottonseed oil cannot be found on the bare shelves of state-run stores. When asked about the president whose portrait was on the wall of the two-room but he shares with his parents and six brothers and sisters, Makzat started to reply. His father silenced him sharply. "It is wiser not to speak," he said.

But some dissent has become more open. Last July, several hundred demonstrators marched down Ashkhabad's main avenue, handing out leaflets protesting food shortages. The leaders were arrested. Mr. Niyazov said they were drug addicts who had lured students to the rally with vodka and marijuana.

We have oo political prisoners in this country." he said.

Turkmens once looked smugly at Russia and other former Soviet republics, where democracy and free markets appeared to spawn mainly ethnic unrest and crime. Turkmenistan's economic and political stability, many said then, was worth the absence of freedom. Those sentiments appear to be waning.

"I'm interested in politics," said a 23-yearold high school physics teacher who gave his name only as Batir. But here we have no free expression. People talk about their problems among themselves, but that's as far as it goes. It's too dangerous to say more."

Re-entry Hazard Feared for Satellite

Errant Chinese Spacecraft

By William J. Broad New York Times Service

NEW YORK - A derelict Chinese spy satellite weighing more than two tons is getting ready to plunge back to Earth, which could create a hazard for people on the ground or an intelligence bonanza for any foreign country that can recover its film and cameras.

U.S. experts and industry reports say the satellite might re-enter the atmosphere in March or April.

Most satellites burn up quickly during re-entry. But this one is said to be heavily shielded and designed to survive the fiery plunge to Earth. Most likely, the satellite will hit the sea in a harmless splash and sink out of sight. Even so, world governments are gearing up for a possible impact on land, which, if it occurs in a heavily populated area, might kill people, embarrass China and prompt an international inci-

Aviation Week & Space Technology says space analysis expect the errant satellite to simply plunge back as an inert lump. But they also say there is a slight chance that the spacecraft's recovery system might still function, leading to the possibility of a bizarre situacion in which the secret spy craft would come sailing down with its parachute open into a place like Central Park or the Champs Elysées.

The satellite has an orbit in-clined 56.5 degrees to the Equator, meaning it could fall onto any part of the Earth between 56.5 degrees north latitude and 56.5 degrees south latitude — a swath that includes most of the Earth's major cities and all of the continental United States.

Haiti Insists U.S. Return Trove of Seized Documents

By Larry Robter
New York Times Service

MIAMI - After landing in Haiti last year, U.S. troops seized more than 150,000 pages of documents from the headquarters of the Haitian armed forces and the country's most feared paramilitary group. Now Haiti wants the records back and accuses Washington of stalling.

The whole issue is becoming an increasingly sore point in relations between the two governments. Haitian officials say the return of the documents is indispensable to their efforts to restore political stability in the country by disarming and prosecuting human rights violators connected with the old regime in Port-au-Prince.

$300 Million IRS Handling Fee?

WASHINGTON - It would cost the Internal Revenue Service more than $300 million to put part of the Republican tax cut in voters' pockets just before next year's election, the

The Republicans' tax bill, part of "budget balancing" legislation that President Bill Clinton has promised to veto. would provide a $500 tax credit for children younger than 18, starting next year. It also would offer a $125 credit for this year. But rather than allow parents to claim it on their regular tax returns due April 15, the Republican legislation would create a separate filing process, with checks to be mailed between Oct. 1 and Oct. 15, just weeks before the November presidential and congressional elections.

It is the separate process that would run up administrative costs, in addition to the estimated $5 billion drop in tax revenue from the $125 credit per child, the IRS says.

The IRS commissioner, Margaret Milner Richardson, said a separate process not only would be costly, it would undermine the agency's electronic filing program aimed at reducing the 2 billion pieces of paper it handles annually. The Republican bill would require the IRS to mail a notice of the credit by Feb. 1 and then mail a special form for claiming the credit by June 1.

"The timing of a tax refund in October of 1996 speaks for itself." said Senator Daniel Patrick Moynihan, Democrat of New York, "A further question occurs, however. What is the expense to the federal government of engaging in an electioncycle tax refund?

Ms. Richardson said the IRS estimates it would cost $40 million to mail the Feb. 1 notice and an additional $29 million to develop and mail the new form for claiming the credit, In all, it would cost $308 million to administer the credit in its

Judge Eases N.Y. Primary Rules

NEW YORK - A federal judge in Brooklyn struck down the Republican Party's rules for New York State's presidential primary, saying they set unfair hurdles for candidates to gather enough signatures on petitions to put their names on ballots in some areas of the state.

If it withstands appeals to higher courts, the ruling by Judge Edward Korman of U.S. District Court would be a significant setback to the state party and its choice for president, Senator Bob Dole of Kansas. Because Mr. Dole has the backing of the state party, he is likely to have a much easier time than other candidates collecting the tens of thousands of signatures needed to get on the ballot.

By far the most restrictive in the nation, the state's primary rules have been criticized by several of Mr. Dole's current and past rivals, including Senator Phil Gramm of Texas, Governor Pete Wilson of California and, most recently, Patrick J. Buchanan.

A Dark Future for Postal Surveys

WASHINGTON — The Postal Service, which got a black eye in its customer satisfaction surveys last year, has decided to stop publicizing the ratings.

A spokesman for the Postal Service, Frank Brennan, said the quarterly ratings, produced by Opinion Research Corp. of Princeton, New Jersey, will still be conducted, but the results will no longer be published in consumer brochures. He said the surveys had not been that helpful to postal managers and the results were "breeding confusion" in the media.

The Postal Service's decisioo to de-emphasize the ratings came at a time wheo the Clinton administration has been urging other federal agencies to survey their customers and establish public standards for service.

But senior postal officials, including Postmaster General Marvin T. Runyon, have made no secret of their unhappiness with their customer survey, in which customer satisfaction plummeted last year after the agency's overnight mail de-livery rate dropped precipitously. Mr. Runyon has said the index is not as reliable or as accurate an index of how well the agency is doing its job as other surveys. He said negative news accounts about poor mail deliveries in one city often push the index down in communities that have no service

Japanese Cabinet Agrees to Cut Army Plan Endorses U.S. Bases

By Nicholas D. Kristof New York Times Service

TOKYO-At the same time that it is asking Washington to American troop strength in Japan, the government Tuesday night approved far-reaching reductions in its own troop strength.

The cuts came at a time when there is growing public debate about the need for American military bases in Japan, which the new plan endorses, describing military cooperation with the United States as important to maintain peace in Asia.

Yet the cuts may also embolden critics in Japan and America who argue that the American military presence is

The critics contend that Japan's willingness to cut back its military strength under-scores a lack of a military threat and should be accompanied by American cutbacks as well. American critics also argue that Japan is a free-rider, depending on the United States to defend its shipping lanes while it takes advantage of the end of the Cold War to trim its own armed forces. Acting at a special late-night session, the Japanese cabinet approved a new "defense " that is supposed to outline Japan's military needs in the post-Cold War era.

The actual cut may not be so great, for in fact there are now 150,000 troops in the army. The navy is to cut an escort division and eliminate some destroyers and anti-submarine aircraft. The air force is slated to eliminate an F-4 fighter squadron.

Military spending is particularly sensitive in Japan because of memories of World War II and because of its constitution, which renounces war.

In theory, Japan has no army but simply a "self-defense force.

Norway to Pause on Joining ${f EU}$

OSLO — Prime Minister Gro Harlem Brundtland says Norway, which rejected membership in the European Union a year ago Tuesday, will probably not attempt to join for at least another five years.

Mrs. Brundtland said that her Labor minority government would strive to keep Norwegian interests high on the European political agenda. And she said that Norway's currency should be linked in some manner to the single European currency that is to be created after 1999.

Asked when EU membership might come up again in Norway, she replied: "It will not be a question in the 1990s. I am sure we are talking about at least five years." (Reuters)

Scalfaro Resists Call for Elections

ROME — Faced with rising support among political leaders for an early general election, President Oscar Luigi Scalfaro praised the government of Prime Minister Lamberto Dini and called Tuesday for calm during the country's six-month presidency of the European Union, beginning in January.

Speaking on an official visit to the Netherlands, Mr. Scalfaro said Italy had "a great responsibility toward Europe and not just Europe" during its EU presidency.

Serbian side during the weekend and local officials threatened to burn the area if it was given back. The Bosnian Serbian leader, Radovan Karadzic, has called for a renegotiation of Sarajevo's status, although that is prohibited under the plan.

UN representatives said last week that the planned Muslim corridor connecting Sarajevo to the Bosnian Muslim enclave of Gorazde in the east will be broadened with the construction of a road. That, too, will run over Serbian territory, near Kalinovik, the birthplace of Ratko Mladic, military leader of the Bosnian Serbs.

Another hot spot is Breko — a town held by the Serbs in the center of the strategic Posavina corridor linking Serbian-held territories in northern Bosnia and the east. The territorial partition agreed on in Dayton foresees international arbitration about Brcko's status, beginning six months after the agreement on Bosnia goes into force. Already, Croatian leaders have vowed to fight any deal there because a widening of the corridor would mean a Croatian evacuation. Of the many potential traps to the forces of NATO as they roll into Bosnia, none could be more deadly than the Bosnian Serbs. Their army, with its 80,000 men, 460 tanks, 400 armored personnel carriers, 1,200 artillery pieces, about 300 anti-aircraft guns and 25 attack helicopters is the most potent force based in Bosnia. # Clinton on Troop Use: 'Strategic Interests' at Stake PRESIDENT: Muted Support

Following are excerpts from President Bill Clinton's address on Bosnia: Let me say at the outset America's role will oot be about fighting a war. It will be about helping the people of Bosnia to secure their own peace agreement. Our mission will be limited, focused and under the command of an American general. In fulfilling this mission, we will have the chance to help stop the killing of innoceot civilians, especially children, and at the same time to bring stability to central Europe, a region of the world that is vital to our national interests. It is the right thing to do.

Today, because of our dedication, America's ideals — liberty, democracy and peace - are more and more the aspirations of people everywhere in the world. It is the power of our ideas, even military might, that makes America a uniquely trusted nation.

With the Cold War over, some people now question the need for our continued active leadership in the world. They believe that much like after World War I. America can now step back from the own borders safe and that the time has come oow to leave to others the hard work of leadership beyood our borders.

I strongly disagree. As the Cold War gives way to the global village, our leadership is oeeded more than ever because problems that start beyond our borders can quickly become problems within them, We're all vulnerable to the organized forces of intolerance and destruction, terrorism, ethnic, religious and regional rivalries, the spread of organized crime and weapons of mass destruction and drug trafficking. Just as surely as Fascism and Communism, these forces also threaten freedom and democracy, peace and prosperity. And they too demand American leadership. America cannot and must oot be the world's policeman. We cannot stop all more than our size, our wealth and our war for all time but we can stop some wars. We cannot save all women and all children. But we can save many of

We can't do everything, but we must do what we can. There are times and places where our leadership can mean the difference between peace and war responsibilities of leadership. They argue and where we can defend our fundamost basic strategic interests.

The terrible war in Bosnia is such a case. Nowhere today is the need for ment, the United States must be an es-American leadership more stark or more sential part of the mission. immediate than in Bosnia. For nearly four years a terrible war has tom Bosnia Horrors we prayed had been banished from Europe forever have been seared into our minds agaio: skeletal prisoners caged behind barbed-wire fences, women and girls raped as a tool of war, defenseless men and boys shot down in the mass graves, evoking visions of World War II concentration camps, and endless lines of refugees marching toward a future of despair.

Now the war is over. American leadership created the chance to build a peace and stop the suffering. Securing peace in Bosnia will also help to build a free and stable Europe. Bosnia lies at the very heart of Europe, next door to many of its fragile new democracies and some of our any harm that may come to them. But closest allies. Generations of Americans have understood that Europe's freedom and Europe's stability is vital to our own national security. The only force capable of getting this job done is NATO, the will suffer the consequences. We will

First, the mission will be precisely defined with clear, realistic goals that can be achieved in a definite period of time. Our troops will make sure that each side withdraws its forces behind the front lines and keeps them there. They will maintain the cease-fire to prevent the war from accidentally starting again.

Second, the risks to our troops will be minimized. American troops will take their orders from the American general who commands NATO. They will be heavily armed and thoroughly trained.

As president my most difficult duty is to put the men and women who volunteered to serve our nation in harm's way when our interest and values demand it. I assume full responsibility for anyone contemplating any action that would endanger our troops should know this: America protects its own. Anyone - anyone - who takes on our troops powerful military alliance of democracies fight fire with fire, and then some.

mittees were scheduled by Secretary of State Warren M. Christopher, Defense Secretary William J. Perry and the current chairman of the Joint Chiefs, General John M. Shalikashvili. The final NATO plan for the Bosnia operation is to be sent to Mr. Clinton this week. The president then hopes for a oonbinding vote of support in Con-gress by mid-December. With or without such support, Mr. Clintoo says, he will go ahead.

The public, meanwhile, appeared sharply divided. One poll conducted Monday after Mr. Clinton's speech found 30 percent of viewers were more likely afterward to support a U.S. troop deployment to Bosnia. But overall, the CNN-USA Today-Gallup Poll found 46 percent of respondents supporting the deployment and 40 percent opposed.

Bonn to Send 4,000 Men

BONN — The government resolved Tuesday to send 4,000 troops to join the proposed NATO peace mission for Bosnia
— the biggest single deployment of German soldiers since World War IL

The bulk of the German contingent in the American-led 60,000-member NATO force will be stationed in Croatia, to avoid exposing them to hostilities by Serbs who recall wartime Nazi atrocities and regard Germans as biased in favor of Croatia

The German force will be largely made up of logistics, medical and transport units rather than combat troops.

Nonetheless, the decision represents a further move away from Germany's postwar tradition of avoiding displays of militarism that might rekindle memories of its bellicose

Chancellor Helmut Kohl's cabinet approved the deployment. Parliament is to debate the decision Dec. 4, and the two . principal opposition parties are divided on the issue. While the Greens said they opposed the deployment, the Social Democrats' parliamentary caucus voted in favor of it.

on trial for murder. General Malan, who led the security force assault against and-apartheid groups in the turbuleot 1980s, also said he feared former soldiers and policemen would be treated unfairly by Mr. Mandela's government as it tries to uncover apartheid-era crimes.

General Malan and some of PRETORIA - A former his top generals have been acleged military-trained hit squad in Natal Province in 1987. The 20 accused will appear in court Friday to be formally charged, with their trial expected to begin in March. The case has highlighted the debate over a new Truth and Reconciliation Commission inlended to investigate murders and torture by the apartheid govemment and by guerrilla groups that fought to topple them.

General Malan, defense minister throughout the 1980s when violent opposition to the apartheid government was at its height, was the most senior of 10 former security force officers charged this month.

"At no stage did the state security council indicate, plan or decide on murder actions,' General Malan said Tuesday in a reference to the inner cabinet that ran security operations in the apartheid era.

However, should any member of the previous state security council be charged with these or similar deeds, democracy.

EDITORIALS/OPINION

Yes, Troops for Bosnia

In a speech on Monday, President Bill Clinton asked the American people and their congressional representatives to approve his plan to send 20,000 troops to Bosnia to help establish the peace. Dispatching soldiers to the Balkans is not a prospect that Americans face with enthusiasm. But the mission that the president defines is limited, achievable and in accordance with U.S. national interests.

Mr. Clinton made a strong case in a sober, measured address. Congress should honor his request in a timely manner so that American troops can be de-ployed, along with 40,000 others from European countries and Canada, once a formal peace agreement is signed in Paris, probably in mid-December. Although Mr. Clinton claims authority to send the troops on his own, congressional approval is essential. The peacekeeping mission is too difficult and potentially too divisive to put American lives at risk without the approval of a majority of both the House and the Senate. The 60,000 NATO troops will be under exclusive NATO control, answerable to an American commanding general. They will operate under rules of en-gagement that let them defend themselves vigorously if threatened from any quarter. Furthermore, their mission will be unencumbered by the kind of wellmeant but dangerous nation-building objectives that brought combat fiascoes and policy quagmires in the recent past.

Having brokered a workable Bosnian peace agreement, the United States cannot bonorably evade responsibility for enforcing it. America's long-standing interest in European security and its hu-manitarian interest in halting an appallingly murderous conflict also argue strongly for American military participation in a carefully designed peace en-forcement mission.

It would, however, be a grave mistake to overestimate what NATO troops can hope to accomplish in the one year they are expected to be in Bosnia. Their objectives should be limited to maintaining the existing cease-fire, physically separating the warring parties and oversee-ing the division of territory agreed to by Balkan leaders in Ohio. There should be oo illusions that Americans can somehow undo the damage of war and restore the unified, multiethnic Bosnia that existed three and a half years ago. Nor can they restore millions of refugees to their lost homes, guarantee the democratic functioning of Bosnian national institutions or assure that war criminals are brought to justice.

That work, in the end, can be done only by the peoples of Bosnia, supported by the international community as a whole. It is not the business of the NATO force. The outside world cannot impose reconciliation and unity in Bosnia.

Western Europe, with help from Washington, can take the lead in providing money for the reconstruction of war-ravaged Bosnia and the resettlement of its 2 million refugees. America can ioin European nations in trying to equalize the balance of postwar military might among Bosnia, Serbia and Croatia to discourage a new outbreak of fighting.

The future of America's military role in Europe, Washington's international leadership and Mr. Clinton's presidency will all be affected by what happens in Bosnia over the next 12 months. Mr. Clinton has defined a reasonable mission for American troops. He deserves the country's carefully considered support.

The Haiti Example

As Haiti slides toward instability again, it is not a bad moment to observe that, come what may, American troops there have already accomplished a great deal. They ended an epidemic of killings by the previous military regime and its friends. Simply by being in the country, U.S. forces have saved many lives. The flow of desperate people attempting to emigrate illegally to Florida dropped off for a year (although in the present atmosphere it is beginning to pick up again). Haiti held an election last summer, although a chaotic one, and if all goes well will hold another for president next month.

Those achievements are worth keeping in mind as the debate gets under way over sending American troops to Bosnia. There would be a lot of similarities between the two operations. Going into Bosnia would be more dangerous, and the prospects for build democracy in one year would be at least as uncertain. But beyond all the important political reasons for going ahead, an enormous number of lives could be saved merely by interrupting the slaughter.

Haiti is only a kind of spring training for the complications that intervention in Bosnia would generate. The president, Jean-Bertrand Aristide, tells some audieoces that he will certainly leave office in February as the constitution requires, but to other audiences he hints that maybe he will reconsider. The presidential election is to be beld in less than three weeks, but preparations are sadly inadequate and some of the parties are already crying foul.

And Mr. Aristide's performance is not the only thing to worry about. His latest outburst was set off by the assassination of a cousin and close friend, an obvious provocation, presumably by people who liked the old regime and are trying to tip over the new democracy. For Haiti, the question now is not only whether the presidential election will be held on schedule but whether the winner will be able to govern in peace after February, when the United Nations mission, including the U.S. troops, pulls out. Similar questions are very likely to arise in Bosnia.

The Clinton administration is now destrying to devise w least a few soldiers in Haiti without seriously bending its promise to withdraw the mission. Meanwhile, it must work with politicians whom it neither likes very much nor trusts very much - as in Bosnia. All that you can say for the venture is that it is saving lives, a lot of them, and is giving democracy a small chance in a place where otherwise it would have oone at all.

A Different Ireland

The Republic of Ireland is a Catholic country not only in numbers (more than 90 percent of the citizens are members of the Church) but in the traditional strength of the relationship between church and state, which extends even to civil law. In the early days of the republic, Catholic principles and prohibitions were written into the constitution, and the clergy were active in mobilizing and encouraging laymen to support those principles in civic life. By a hair's breadth, this history was changed last Friday, when voters in the republic repealed a constitutional provision banning divorce.

Every political party in the country supported the repeal. The returns were extremely close, but the formidable opposition of the bishops, the Pope and even Mother Teresa were overcome when the ballots were counted.

The vote does not necessarily signal a rift between church and state but rather a change in their relationship. In years past, the word of the hierarchy was virtually decisive in Ireland. Now it remains influential, but voters and government leaders more easily make the distinction between religious and secular concerns. In part, attitudes have changed because of ournerous scandals, recently revealed, involving priests. But the election results acknowledge the reality that the ban did not keep unhappy families to-gether. Instead, tens of thousands of separated spouses and their children were left in a state of limbo, unable to reorganize their lives or form new families under any circumstances. Hard as it may be for the devout to accept, there are unhappy families in Ireland, as everywhere else, and no law can force individuals to reconcile.

Referendum opponents cited the social impact of divorce in the United States and in Europe in arguing against change, and surely there is ample reason for the warning. But in the end, the reality of modem life and concern for the welfare of those whose marriages have failed were more persuasive in morivating voters.

The election also suggests a new flexibility in dealing with those who do not share the faith of the majority, which will not go unnoticed by those Protestants in the North whose fears of Church influence in secular society have hindered reconciliation. While voters were concerned chiefly with establishing the civil rights of individuals in the republic, not about improving its image in the North, the positive change in the latter category has to be a happy by-product of the vote.

Listen to Democratic Taiwan, Noisy and Distinct

TAIPEI — The trucks move day and night through the streets of Taiwan like creatures alive and wild with their own energy — shouting and singing through their loudspeakers, denouncing. trumpeting, cajoling, forbidding escape or the succor of a moment's silence.

The loudspeakers, mounted fore, aft and atop, deliver a gigantic rolling headache. But they also deliver the sound of democracy - to a small country new to it, and to a huge, glowering country whose leaders detest the thought of it.

This is campaign time in Taiwan, a free campaign, fought hard, for the free election of a national legislature. It is the most important democratic step since 40 years of military rule ended in 1987 and the democratic process began on this island an often tested missile-distance across the waters from Communist China. And next March an even more important election will take place. The people of the islands will take part in a direct presidential election — the first direct election of a national leader in the thousands of The economic development of Taiwan democratic development. That is news of importance far beyond this island.

Asia has a batch of countries developing ecocomically but not democratically. Just give Asians a full belly, the colonial West used to say. Now that is amended: Just give them a motorbike and big-screen television.

Taiwan is crowded, its cities are messy and its roadsides are junk-strewn. But politically it is becoming quite handsome, a living denial of the slur that Chinese are content to live without political freedom. Westerners have a way of thinking of Taiwan in relation only to China and their own interests. Mostly they think nervously of how furious Beijing will get if the West gives any acknowledgment or respect to this island that the Communists say is their own province, now and forever. The West trembles to breathe a word about allowing Taiwan to take part in international activities — even belping refugees. Its skin crawls with fear that Beijing will reduce the West's right to any hope of ever selling to China.

The worldwide diplomatic blockade that Beijing has created against Taiwan is not the worst of it. When Beijing thinks that the substantial movement toward an independent Taiwan is getting stronger. or sees the horror of democracy rising on this prosperous island so close to the mainland, the Chinese Communists mount menacing military operations.

No pretense is made that the exercise and the ugly warnings by top military men are not aimed at intimidating Taiwan and aborting its growing fascination with democratic practice. Expect more threats.

The island's people, ethnically Chinese, descend either from families that have lived here for centuries or from immigrants who fled to Taiwan with the Nationalist army when it was defeated by the Communists in 1949. The ruling party is the Kuomintang, a mellowed offspring of the hard-handed party of Chiang Kai-shek. It is headed by President Lee Teng-hui.

Mr. Lee gave Beijing a heart attack recently by visiting his American alma more trucks. mater, Cornell University. Beijing has ilege of buying from China billions of dollars more in goods than the West has to him and the United States for such impertinence. The Kuomintang stands for reunification with the mainland - some day, when Beijing manages to become non-Communist, and a conven to human rights. So it is denounced by the New Party, made up of breakaway KMT hardliners, a kind of Confucian Coalition. The major opposition is the Democratic Progressive Party - strong for independence, but not ready to invite Communist attack by making a Taiwan July Fourth declaration.

Panting for the China trade, the United States forbids Taiwan representatives to set foot in the State Department or the White House. But the weeks of democratic campaigning prove that whether Beijing and its international business lob-by approve or not. Taiwan has produced a prosperous, growingly democratic society of its own, separate in political practice and desire from the mainland.

In Afghanistan, Neighbors Help Brew a Crisis for Southwest Asia

ANBERRA — A major crisis looms in Southwest Asia. The recent success of the Pakistan-backed Islamic movement Taleban in expanding its territorial control in Afghanistan and bombing Kabul is a disturbing development not only for the Afghan people but also for Iran

Tehran and New Delhi may now find it imperative to augment their assistance to the government of President Burbanuddin Rabbani in Kabul to counter Pakistan's fresh attempts to achieve dominance in Afghanistan. Ever since the victory of the Afghan Islamic resistance groups in April 1992 over the Sovietinstalled government in Kabul, Pakistan has found its efforts to gain a controlling influence in post-Communist Afghan politics

By Amin Saikal tempts to advance the interests of its protegé, Gulbuddin Hekmatyar, Pakistan failed to achieve its aims. These included securing access to the markets and resources of the Central Asian region, now freed of rule from Moscow. When Mr. Hekmatyar's unprincipled Islamic militancy, and political and military incompetence, finally proved him to be useless, Pakistan late last year took steps to deploy the Taleban force. It is made up of Afghans trained in refugee camps by a Pakistani Islamic organization, and of many of their ethnic kin from Pakistan's side of the border.

When they reached the out-skirts of Kabul earlier this year, however, they were beaten back by forces loyal to President Rabbani and Ahamed Shah Masoud. his supreme commander. These forces stood firm against any foreign intervention in Af-ghanistan. Their refusal to capitulate to Pakistan made them attractive to Pakistan's archenemy, India, and Pakistan's regional competitor, Iran.

To counter this setback, as well as divert attention from growing civil violence ln Karachi, Pakistan in early September provided Taleban fighters achieved the Taleban forces extensive lorapid successes by first taking gistical support and directed them Kandahar, Afghanistan's largest to take over of Herat in north- Iran find Taleban control of Herat ternational Herald Tribune.

western Afghanistan, thus opening an overland corridor for Pakistan to Turkmenistan.

This development brought pro-Pakistani Islamic forces to Afghanistan's border with Iran, and undermined India's efforts to maintain a regional balance with Pakistan. Taleben air raids on Kabul and a siege of the city now threaten the capital itself. Taleban is known for opposition to Shiite Islam, the majority sect in Iran, and for a determination to restructure Afghanistan along regressive lines. This may suit the Pakistan authorities, who calculate that they will be able to manipulate a weak and divided Afghanistan, but it can only set alarm bells ringing in Tehran and New Delhi.

to be tolerable. The people of Herat share a common language and culture with Iran, as do the followers of President Rabbani and Commander Masoud. Nor would India sit idly by and let Pakistan cause a dramatic tilt in the regional balance of power. This sets the scene for active Iranian and Indian support to the Afghan government. As a result, Pakistan may find that it has bitten off more than it can chew. Its self-serving, shortsighted maneuvers may plunge the entire region into crisis, with Pakistan likely to be the major loser.

In 1958, I remember escorting Reginald Maudling, the British minister for European affairs, to see Walter Hallstein, the president of the European Commission. The Treaty of Rome had been signed the previous year. The Six were going ahead with a customs union.

That customs union was not simply a commercial arrangement. The Treaty of Rome, which embodied it, was a major step toward the present Union. It seemed at the time to divide Enrope. In fact, it turned out to be the best means of unifying Europe. Without the continued success of the Six from 1957 onward, the nine members that have joined since then would never have wanted to join.

Similarly, an inner EMU core would be a major step toward a European federation. If a small group of countries around France and Germany decided on economic union, it would be such a momentous move toward a pooling of national powers that a common foreign and defense policy (much easier in this small grouping) could not be far behind. But the questions of organization will be equally momentous. The present European Commission would not constitutionally be able to service simultaneously an inner and an outer group. Might not a new treaty (perhaps the Treaty of Aachen) be necessary, along with a new, small executive that would deal with economic union, foreign the IMF and the G7? This would mean that Europe could begin to run its own show on defense

On this basis, the present commission would be left, rather like the OEEC in 1957, servicing a

the rest of the community's fields, such as social policy and competition? What would the relation be between the inner group and the outer circle? All 15 or 30 member states would need to be consulted, but the inner group would have the key vote. Would not the outer circle be the natural place for new entrants from Eastern and Central Europe?

These are the real questions confronting the organization of Europe today. For Europe has a choice. It can continue a futile effort to fit 15 wildly disparate states into one meaningful whole. Or those states that are willing to forge ahead should get together and decide how to do so and what their relationship will be with the rest. One day the rest will join.

In the meantime, those states should not hold up those that choose to act together to improve the prosperity of their citizens and their power to defend their interests in the world. Much will depend on whether, as in \ 1950, France and Germany

Why America Must Act in Bosnia

WASHINGTON — For the last week or so, on television and in the newspapers. members of Congress and others have asked the same question over and over again: Why should the United States send 20,000 troops to Bosnia? The best answer I know was provided not by a politician or statesman but, as sometimes happens, a writer: Elie Wiesel.
"We must do something to stop the bloodshed in that country." It is that simple.

I once thought otherwise. In fact, when Mr. Wiesel made that statement — at the 1993 opening of the Holocaust Memorial Museum — I winced. The remark came in the course of Mr. Wiesel's speech and had an extemporaneous feel to it. The Nobel laureate had turned to President Bill Clinton and said: "And Mr. President, I must tell you something. I have been in the former Yugoslavia last fall. I cannot sleep since what I have seen ...

"We must do something to stop the bloodshed in that country. People fight each other and children die. Why? Something, anything, must be done.

I, too, had been to the former Yugoslavia — just after Mr. Wiesel, as it happens — and I had come away with a different prescription for America: keep out. Bosnia is a formidable, scary place of high mountains, brutish people and tribal grievances rooted in history and myth born of boozy nights by the fire. It's the place where World War I began and where the wars of Europe persist, an ember of bate still glowing for By Richard Cohen

At the Pentagon, my view was confirmed. Mention Bosma and men with stars shuddered.

Things have changed since then -not entirely, but enough. Serbia's insanity exceeded its grasp. It oow knows it cannot win the war it started. Croatia and an improved Bosnian Muslim army have matched it in some places, bettered it in others. Sanctions have hitten down hard on the present Yogoslavia Serbia and Montenegro and U.S. airpower, doing business as NATO, has proven both effective and intimidating. War is tiring and the former Yugoslavia is exhausted.

Besides, there is peace. The three sides have signed off on a document oone of them really likes but all of them must honor. The United States will not be heading into a war zone but instead will be implementing an armistice. Almost certainly, the occasional rogue commander will break the peace and the occasional sniper will hone his skill on some poor soul -maybe a U.S. soldier. This will happen, probably and sadly, but it is no reason for the United States not to do what it can to ensure the peace in Yugoslavia. All these are good and suf-ficient reasons for the United States to honor President's Clinton's pledge. But there is another: Mr. Wiesel's. We have to do something. It is true that we Americans should oot be the world's policeman and that yes, Europe ought to be able to handle its own affairs. But Eureasons that defy reason itself. rope proved incapable of ending the killing on its own flank. The United Nations, much maligned and hapless because we all prefer it that way, tried and failed also. So it comes down to us, America, and that is all there is to it. A job needs to be done, we can do it - and we ought to. It was always hard for me to counsel staying out. I had seen the prisoner-of-war camps of Bosnia and the destruction of graceful Mostar. I will never forget any of that. The torture of thousands, the rape of even more thousands, the mass murder of unarmed men - a grandfather forced to eat his grandson's liver - all this evoked the Holocaust. Atrocities were being committed in Europe and the world, including America, was doing precious little.

In the end, sending troops m Bosnia may not work, either. Americans may die and still the war might go on -- a pause for one side or another (probably the Serbs) to catch their breath, and then sniper fire from the mountains. But we can say we did the right thing. To do nothing would put us all into a category the late British writer Arthur Koestler created for a fellow intellectual who said be was unaware of the Holocaust — "an accomplice by omis-sion," Mr. Koestler called him. Mr. Wiesel, another of those pesky intellectuals, said some-thing similar to Mr. Clinton that day in 1993. He was right to have done so and Mr. Clinton, to my mind, was right to have proceeded cautiously. At the time the president called Bosnia "a challenge m all of us."

Now is the time to meet it.

A Star Simpson Prosecutor Flops on Broadway

NEW YORK — As New York hu-miliations go, closing on Broad-way on opening night is near the top. Such was the self-inflicted fate of Christopher Darden on a recent Sunday - only weeks after he had held millions spellbound in the O. J. Simpson trial, the trial that was supposed to make everyone who fell within its spotlight a star forever. It was on that Sunday that Mr. Dar-den, in his first visit ever to New York

MEANWHILE

City, was to give afternoon and evening lectures at $25 a ticket, with $100 buying a fan the chance to paw the man himself at a pre-lecture "catered reception." But at the matinée I attended at Town Hall, a 1,500seat theater off Times Square, Mr. Darden's andience included a red-plush sea of roughly 900 empty seats. After he finished, both the evening performance and a Monday night repeat in Philadelphia were canceled.

This Broadway flop may be but a footnote to tabloid history. But it is also a poignant illustration of what can happen to good people, especially good people in public service, when America's Faustian culture of celebrity comes to call. Wasn't this young prosecutor one of the very few good things to come out of the circus in Los Angeles? He still is, or could be, if he can wrest himself from that machine that reduces the suddenly famous m commodities suitable for slicing and dicing on "Hard Copy"

On that Sunday, as he gave in to the beast, I felt sorry for the guy. A block down 43d Street from Town Hall, a large and excited black audience lined up at another theater — to see "Def Comedy Jam." Mr. Darden's sparser audience was older and predominantly white; the desultory atmosphere was that of long-gone Times Square freak shows and porno houses. In place of barkers were a concert promoter and a publisher, ready m pounce should the press try to pry loose any of their client's intellectual property gratis.

as a procession of women, some of them balancing pizza with their cameras, insisted not just on an autograph but a kiss. "Chris, come party with us!" belted one impatient customer.

At the lecture itself, Mr. Darden picked up the cue, presenting himself as a clown and sex symbol. "I have tried to get married," he said as he deflected gossip linking him to his co-prosecutor Marcia Clark, inducing cries of "Keep trying!" and "I'll try with you!" But once he turned to his prepared talk, the mood changed completely. Mr. Darden, it turned out, actually had something to say.

His subjects were spouse abuse and race. "There's a man in this room right now who beats his wife or his girlfriend," be speculated as he slipped into his familiar courtroom manner, built on introspective pauses and incantatory repetitions.

Describing himself as a Republican who doesn't believe in a "race-based" world view, Mr. Dardeo turned his attention to America's racial divide.

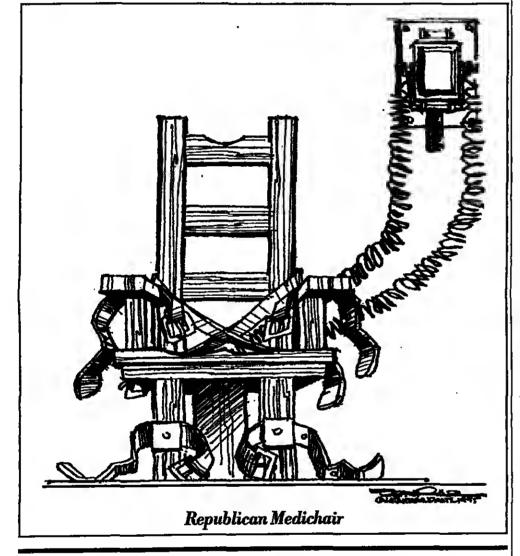

During the 'catered reception,' But rather than pander to an audience Mr. Darden stood in a dim passage way that waited for him to trash the Simpson jury, he instead used his platform to get his white listeners to see the L.A. Police Department from an African-American perspective. He told vividly of how he, too, had once been manhandled and accused of burglary by the police sim-ply because he was driving a new car slowly in a white neighborhood.

"We're all Americans, we all sink or swim together," said Mr. Darden in a parting benediction, urging the assembled to "talk about issues that divide us." He sent me home feeling that he had used his talent to further that conversation, miraculously refocusing the energies of curiosity-seekers, my-self included, who had arrived with titillation on the brain.

In other words, Mr. Darden's show is that rare flop well worth reviving. and for the largest possible audience. But to do so, he would not merely have to slash the ticket price; he'd have to do the thoroughly un-American thing of declaring himself that rare 15-minute celebrity whose soul is not for sale. Regarding "Will Germany Join the 21st Century?" (Finance, Nov. 21):

I cannot count the oumber of editorials I have read since 1980 that have predicted the imminent demise of the German economy because of the heavy cost of the German welfare system, high labor costs. the exorbitantly high tax rates and the aging and obsolete heavy industrial base.

At first I believed them, and I sat back and patiently awaited the harsh, unfortunate downturn. There were downturns, but by American standards they were somewhat soft, and they were always followed by continued growth and profitability in an already large economy. Gradually, I began to doubt the credibility of these doomsday forecasts.

Will the Germans join the 21st century? I think they will, and they might surprise us with the standard of living that they join it with.

As to the impending downfall of the German economy, I would bet my bottom Deutsche mark that it ain't going to happen.

Faiths Coexist

Regarding "Revitalized Orthodox Church Scarches for Unity" (Nov. 9):

The article fails to point out that the Greek Orthodox faith, along with the Armenian Church and the Jewish faith, have enjoyed religious freedom in Turkey ever since 1453, when Constantinople became popularly known as Istanbul with the Turkish conquest. Instead, the article mentioned

The writer's concern about 'the erosion hy technology of journalist's status, prestige and influence in public affairs" is You read about it every-

On Charity

Regarding "Stingy and De-vious" (Editorial, Nov. 9): It's debatable whether private charity would fill the gap left by cutbacks in government assistance to the poor. What's not at issue, how

I am writing to express my concern about the article on the Princess of Wales (Nov. 22). Quite frankly, the princess has until now demonstrated an astonishing lack of vision and bored most of us with her dramas on her illness, consequently causing considerable damage to the royal family.

O'Neill's 'Elms': Uneasy in Ireland

By Sheridan Morley International Herald Tribune

ONDON — Eugene O'Neill's 'Desire Under the Elms'' (at the Tricycle) is on the move again. First seen on Broadway in 1924, this was the story of Phaedra and Hippolytus transposed to a New England farm of the 1850s. At the Lyrie Hammersmith Studio, Paul Godfrey's "The Modern Husband" is an intriguing revamp of a long-neglected Henry Fielding drama that has been left in period but totally restructured. It now runs less than two hours rather than over three, and what Godfrey has done is cut to the quick of the action about a man who is willing "in this stock-jobbing age" to prostitute his wife in order to stay out of a debtors' prison.

Fielding, sooo after this, gave up play-writing for "Tom Jones," hut here as in the novel there is the constant shock of modernity, His world was one where money and class mattered a lot more than virtue or vice, and where gossip was the common currency. By James Sterngold New York Times Service

OS ANGELES - To understand the deep changes roiling the Los Angeles Times and its parent, Times Mirror Co., four months after a management turnover that brought wrenching cutbacks to the paper and its staff, it is useful to look much further back, to a different turning point in the paper's history.

On March 5, 1961, the oewspaper began a tough, five-part series on the far-right-wing John Birch Society. But for those who knew the Chandler family, which controls the newspaper, it was more than an expose on some anti-Communist zealots.

The Chandlers had been using the Times as a mouthpiece for their intensely conservative politics, and so the series was perceived as both a declaration of editorial independence and an attack by a part of the family led by Otis Chandler, who had succeeded his father as publisher a year earlier, against a faction led by Philip Chandler. Ons's uncle and a stout supporter of the John Birch Society.

Philip Chandler resigned from the company's board eight months later, and Otis Chandler was on his way to a 20-year reign of rising profit, journalistic excellence and what many perceived as a liberal editorial agenda.

Mirror also publishes the Baltimore Sun and Hartford Courant newspapers, as well as consumer and trade magazines and books on medical, economic and legal topics.

According to former top editors and exoff what amounted to a subtle coup: He ensured that the measure of the newspaper's success in its owners' eyes would be financial returns rather than the number of Republican politicians the paper helped elect.

Whatever understanding there was, however, is as much a part of history as the series on the John Birch society. As the newspaper's returns dwindled in the late 1980s, a trend accelerated by the downward spiral of the local economy, the conservative heirs of Philip Chandler have pushed for management changes and more influence over the paper's content.

The first wish was granted this year when Robert F. Erburu was replaced as chief ex-ecutive by Mark H. Willes, a former vice chairman of General Mills Co., but the second wish seems unfulfilled, at least so far.

Prominent in their absence from the fray, at least publicly, are Otis Chandler, now 67, his three sons and his two daughters. Prominent in his desire to appear ascendant is his cousin

Jeffrey, Philip's son. Whatever the merits of Jeffrey Chandler's views — he is a large shareholder but has oo role in the company's management — he is the only Chandler who is talking to all comers about the newspaper that has been the symbol of the family's achievements.

The Times is the beochmark publication of Times Mirror Co., a media conglomerate with a weighty presence in the United States. Times growing, it was just a whole bunch of rich people clipping coupons," Jeffrey Chandler, 53, the owner of two radio stations in San

Good OECD Grades, Mostly, for U.S. Tech Stocks Shine

By Carl Gewirtz rional Herald Tribune

PARIS - The United States emerged with flying colors Tuesday from its annual examination on overall economic management - with an outlook of reasonable growth, subdued inflation, lower deficit spending and a stabilizing international debt - though some aspects of its comportment at home and abroad were described as disquieting.

The examiners, the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development, projected moderate growth of 3 percent this year and 2.25 percent next year, with the inflation rate edging up 0.2 percentage point in each

The group's annual report said, however, that "it is difficult to ascertain how much of an impact lower federal spending may have over the short term, especially as tax cuts may offset some or all the conractionary effects."

Although a long-standing advocate of reducing the deficit, the OECD is concerned that regardless of how President

For its new the OECD. Bill Clinton and Congress resolve their stalemate over the budget, "the final outcome will most likely weaken the social safety net," which, in turn, will aggravate worsening income inequality trends."

The report found a "source of disquiet" in trends in American wages in the last 20 years. It said that "ultimately, some progress must be made in addressing the deeper sources" of the "inequalities in living conditions in American society.

The report also questioned the desirability of reducing federal spending on construction, research and development fi-nanced by discretionary spending, which is scheduled for cuts of roughly 30 percent in real, or inflation-adjusted terms

Another worry is the rush by the Republican majority in Congress to ease reg-

It also recommends higher taxes on energy, calling American energy taxes "extremely modest by international standards," and a broadening of the tax base to include more fringe benefits, capital income and transfers. The report also termed U.S. trade policy clearly troublesome" and called the recent heightening of trade frictions with Japan "regrettable."

"Threatening unilateral sanctions prior to adjudicating cases by the new dispute-settlement mechanism of the World Trade Organization runs counter to the spirit of multilateralism," the report said.

By Alan Krauss Special to the Herald Tribune

BUDAPEST - Anti-inflatioo measures in formerly Communist countries that have cut average pay levels by more than half since 1990 have made wage-earners the victims of economic reform, according to the International Labor Organization. Health and education workers have been hit hardest, ILO economists say, as average inflacon-adjusted wages plunged as much as 60 percent — in Russia and Ukraine — and by smaller amounts elsewhere. Russian healthcare workers today earn only about half the nationwide average of about $80 a month, while in Bulgaria, health workers are paid 25 percent of the $70-a-month national average. Prices of energy, food and other necessities, meanwhile, have climbed steadily. The ILO, a UN group, said it would present bolds spent more mone evidence of what it called the destructive social and economic consequences of restrictive wage policies in Russia and its former satellites at a three-day symposium here that begins

Mitsubishi Electric, however, raised concern that a flood of investment in new facilities by chipmakers could begin weighing on global semiconductor prices in the middle of the next financial year, which begins April 1, 1996.

NEC's consolidated net income jumped 7g percent, to 20.24 billion yen ($199 million) in the six months ended Sept. 30, and sales climbed 10.4 percent. to 1.922 trillion yen. Earnings per share rose to 13.10 yen from 7.36 yen a year earlier.

Mitsubishi Electric's consolidated net was 21 percent higher, at 25.2 billion yen, as sales rose 5 percent to 1.603 trillioo yen. Earnings per share climbed to 10.97 yen from 9.12 yen.

NEC is Japan's leading com-puter-chip maker, and Mitsubishi Electric is one of the five largest makers. NEC is also Japan's largest manufacturer of Many analysts have predicted that global computer-chip sales will continue gaining through the end of the decade. Globally, the market should more than double to $331 billion in 2000 from $149 billion this year, according to a recent report by the U.S.-based research firm Dataquest Inc.

■ Nikkei Gets a Lift

The Nikkei Stock Average rose to a 10-week high as a stable U.S. dollar boosted technology and steel shares and hints of a solution to the problems of Japan's housing-loan companies lifted banking is-sues. Bloomberg Business News reported.

"There's still a trend toward buying electricals, especially on the back of moves in New York," said Peter Boyce, a Japanese-equities trader at James Capel Securities.

CRA Stokes Up for Battle Firm Aims to Break Coal Unions' Power

as broken labor unions' decades-old grip on its iron-ore mines. Now it's trying to do the miners' union would be the beginning of the miners' union would be the beginning of the has broken labor unions' decades-old grip on its iron-ore mines. Now it's trying to do the same at its coal mines.

While the resulting profit could run into tens of millions of dollars a year, the task will be a lot harder, and the risks are huge: A strike against the coal industry could cost Australia Australian dollar plummeting and cause Japanese and South Korean steel plants major coal customers — to cut production.

'I don't think you could de-unionize the coal industry if you take the unions head-on," said John Colnan, a mining analyst at Shaw Stock-broking in Sydney. "The Australian economy is so reliant on coal exports, it's enormous.

Coal holds a unique position in Australia's economy. It earns the country 8.2 billion Australian dollars ($6.1 billion) a year from exports. Australia dominates world trade in seaborne coal. The prices Australian coal producers charge Japanese consumers are industry benchmarks, largely determining prices around the world.

Yet CRA has a lot to gain. In the iron business, switching the miners from hourly wages to monthly salaries — shoving the union aside in the process - has brought more productivity and record profit. The workers earn more, too, CRA says - about 7,000 dollars more annually than the average iron miner, who makes about 50,000 dollars a year.

CRA even broke the tugboat union at its ports by selling the boats and signing nonunion contracts with the new owners. That means CRA's iron ore moves steadily out of its ports, even if the rest of Australia's harbors are shut down. CRA is leading the charge against the min-ing unions, which like most Australian unions are shrinking. Union membership has fallen from almost 70 percent of the work force after from almost 70 percent of the work force after World War II to about 30 percent now.

Since the beginning of 1991, CRA stock has more than doubled, from 8.92 dollars when it ime, "said Mr. Head, the company's spokesbusiness, "there is even more upside than in end for the mining unions, so they are likely to fight hard. The coal miners are tough-spirited, better paid than the iron miners and well

'Once people are in the industry, we make $20 million a day in export earnings, send the sure they are looked after." said John Mairland, joint oational president of the Construcnon Forestry Mining and Electrical Union, the coal miners' union. "How many people wouldn't want to move into an industry and earn an average of 1,300 dollars to 1,400 dollars a week? If you advertised the jobs, you would get knocked down in the rush.

It wasn't always that way. Militancy in the coal mining industry was born of terrible working conditions in the early 1900s and the autocratic rule of some mine owners.

These days, however, the strong-arm stuff doesn't work as well. CRA is promising workers more money in return for more productivity. "It's just good business sense — there's onthing magical about it," said Ian Head, a CRA

"All the indicators we have when we put workers on contract are that we are getting very rapid and very measurable improvements in

But CRA is proceeding cautiously with the coal miners. It has taken a small whack at the union at its Vickery mine in New South Wales, where it said the closed shop discriminated against women. It got the union to agree to let more women join.

The big fight is likely to be bard and long, however. If it cuts into coal exports, it would burt the Australian economy and currency, not to mention putting a big dent in Japanese and Korean steel production.

began its anti-union push, to more than 21 man, "It doesn't matter if it's this year or next dollars oow. If CRA can win in the coal year or the year after."

Reliance May Delist In Bombay

BOMBAY - Reliance Industries Ltd., the largest private company in India, said Tuesday it might remove its listing from the Bombay Stock Exchange.

The news sent shudders through the market, and the Sensitive Index closed down 63.06 points, at 2.960.22.

"There was panic selling in the market," one dealer said. "Reliance has threatened to delist from BSE, but what about the investors?

Reliance Industries shares, which account for 10 percent of the Sensitive Index, fell 10.5 rupees, to 209 ($6.13).

Reliance Industries is in a dispute with the exchange over the issuance of duplicate shares that led to a three-day suspen-sion of its stock. The company has denied any wrongdoing. 'The company is considering various options including delisting," a spokesman for the petrochemicals and textiles concern said.

The company said delisting would not mean its stock would stop trading on the exchange, India's largest, but that the company would not be answerable to the exchange's board. But the executive director of the exchange, R.C. Mathur, said the company must obey the rules. Reliance Industries shares also trade on the year-old Nanonal Stock Exchange.

A newspaper report said three other Reliance companies were considering delisting. They are Reliance Petroleum Ltd., Reliance Capital Ltd. and Reliance Industrial Infrastructure Ltd.

The exchange suspended Reliance Industries shares for three days last week to punish the company for wrongly issuing replacement share certificates. (Bloomberg, Reuters)

Firm Bullish on India Goldman, Sachs & Co. said it planned private equity placements worth several hundred million dollars in unlisted companies in India over the next five years, Reuters reported.

Jobless Rate in Japan Remains at Record High

TOKYO - The government said Tuesday that unemployment was at a record high of 3.2 percent for a fifth consecutive month in October, bolstering the view that the country's economic ills are far from over.

The greatest job losses came, as they have for months, at manufacturing companies and among young people and middle-aged men, the government said. About 5.6 percent of adults under age 25 were without jobs, while 4.8 percent of men between 55 and 64 were unemployed. . Tokyo said manufacturers were cutting costs to offset weak demand, falling prices and the still-strong yen. Small manufacturers unable to cope were going out of business, forcing workers out of jobs. Compared with the like month a year earlier, about 430,000 manufacturing jobs were lost, a decline of 2.8 percent, to 14.69 million. Agriculture lost about 110,000 workers.

WWF World Wide Fund For Nature (formerly World Wildlife Fund)

International Sectroariat, 1196 Gland, Swirzerland.

Outside the industrialised west, no-one has to be told to respect their riders. It's samply the way accirty is organised. Which is why WWF - World Wide Fund for Nature tries to work with older people in the villages of the tamforests. With WWF's help, they learn to teach the younger members of their communities about ronsetvation,

In Kafne Flats, Zamhia, it's Chief Hamusonde (93). Chief Bakary (78), is our man in Anjavimihavanana, northern Madagascar.

In Ban Kling Sai, Thailand, we invoke the Ventrable Papasto Bhikkhu, arventy-three year old rhief Buddhist monk.

This isn't just expediency, it's how WWF helieves conservation projects should be run. Briore you teach someone, we helieve you have to learn from them.

We spend years visiting rillage after village, talking to the people, listening to them, living with them, understanding how they hee their lives.

Only then are we ahle to gain the confidence of the follage elders.

Once thry realise we're in their side, our elderly renverts pur forward the argument for conservation with a acal that belies their years.

"Umle" Prom (68), another of our That community leaders, rells us that he frequently gets sculded when he starts telling people in the market than they should leave the forests alone.

But he gets results.

Unrie Prom and his fellow villagers recently managed to prevent a nen lagging romession, and set up a rommunity forest where tree felling is now forbidden.

Ninety-three year old Chief-Hamusonde also makes things happen.

Income from the Kafne Flats game rearrie in Zambia is finaling a school, a clinic and new water hareholes for the local villages.

In Madagascar, reventy-right year old Chief Bakaty's village makes a profit by selling fruit grown in their new tree mirsery. to help teachers incorporate conservation into the curriculum More importantly, Chief Bakary's village now takes fewer 20,1881 primary trachers in Madagascat have already taken trees from the califorest because the nursery can provide firewood and poles for construction. Not that we don't helieve in catching them while they're part. And WWF produce tearning aids as well as trachets.

We commission educational factsheets, booklets, posters and rideos in over twenty different languages. Thrse are distributed to schools and rollings all over the world

If you can help our work with a donation or a legacy please retire to the membership officer at the address appointe. You only have to look around you to see that the world still has an awful lot to learn about conservation.

HE'S JUST ABOUT OLD ENOUGH FOR OUR TEACHER TRAINING PROGRAMME.

A NEW ENTREPRENEURIAL and international spirit is blowing away the cobwebs of tradition in Paris. Once content to be the capital of France and of a colonial empire, it now aspires to be the center, if not the capital, of a powerful, unified Europe. This new vigor expresses itself in dozens of ways, among them the expansive mergers and acquisitions of many French companies and the emergence of a new generation of entrepreneurs and chief executives who think in European and global L'Ambroisie, 9, place des Vosges, 4th. Tel.: 42 78 51 45. Sumptuous decor and food on the beautiful Place des Vosges. Noted for fish and seafood.

Benoît, 20, rue St. Martin, 4th. Tel.: 42 72 25 76. This pretty, traditional bistro dates back to the early years of the century.

One food critic called it the Rolls-Royce of bistros. Foie gras and cassoulet are specialties.

Bofinger, 5, rue de la Bastille, 4th. Tel.: 42 72 87 82. The oldest brasserie in Paris, with marvelous Belle Epoque decor. Near the new Opera House. Noted for its is of the highest clessical shellfish and sauerkraut.

La Cantine des Gourmets, 113, ev. de la Bourdonnais, 7th. Tel.: 47 05 47 96. A quiet, elegant restaurant. The kitchen stresses fish and herbs, but there's much else

Chiberta, 3, rue Arsène-Houssaye. 8th. Tel.: 45 63 77 90. Elegant, modern decor; pleasant, smiling service; menu emphasizes southwestern Basque dishes. Specialties include ravioli dishes, beautifully prepared cod and calf's kidneys.

Le Divellec, 107, rue de l'Université, 7th. Tel.: 45 51 91 96. You can hardly open a Parisian newspaper without reading of the high and mighty dining here. All are concentrating on the fisb brill with champagne sauce. scallops and several dozen other marine offerings. Lunch prices double in the evening.

Fouquet's, 99, av. des Champs-Elysées, 8th. Tel.: 47 23 70 60, Right on the corner of the Champs-Elysées and the Avenue George V, Fouquet's is a landmark - Winston Churchill ate here.

Le Grand Véfour, 17, rue de Beaujolais, 1st. Tel.: 42 96 56 27. Some people swear that this is the best restaurant in Paris; others argue that it is overpriced and overrated. We think it lies somewhere between those extremes. It has the charm for special occasions and a lavish 18th-century decor.

Guy Savoy, 18, rue Troyon, 17th. Tel.: 43 80 40 61. proud of their mother tongue, a surprising number Now one of the most renowned restaurants in the making an effort to learn it. city. Foie gras, oysters in aspic, Bresse chicken or grilled pigeon prepare the way for a paradise of > Joël Robuchon, 59. avenue Raymond Poincaré, 16h. Tel.: 47 27 12 27. Joël Robuchon has been hoisted to the summit of culinary farne. Just reward for a great chef and pleasant, modest fellow. His lamb is exquisite, but he brings out the best in the humblest ingredient. purée de pommes de terre, which elevates the potato to new status. Book weeks in advance.

> Jules Verne, second floor, Eiffel Tower, 7th, Tel.: 45 55 61 44. Reserve well ahead of time: This restaurant has a deserved reputation for excellence and one of the best views of Paris.

Lasserre, 17, avenue Franklin D. Roosevelt, 8th. Tel.: 43 59 53 43. Stars of the theater, screen and politics favor Lasserre, where people strut while sitting down. More serious customers are also there for the food, for which there's only one word: magnifique!

Laurent, 41, avenue Gabriel, 8th. Tel.: 42 25 00 This famous restaurant is set in a garden. The cuisine standards.

Lucas-Carton, 9, place de le Madeleine, 8th. Tel.: 42 65 22 90. Lucas-Carton perpetuates French gastronomic traditions even though it is now Japanese-owned. The wine cellar is exceptional – but check the prices first.

Maison Blanche, 15, avenue Montaigne, 8th. Tel.: 47 23 55 99. The clientele is fashionable and the decor modem. The cooking brings out the flavors of southwestern France and Provence.

Maxim's, 3, rue Royale, 8th. Tel.: 42 65 27 94. This famous eatery has had its ups and downs recently. The decor is as good as ever. Eating fashion bas swung to lunchtime.

Le Petit Montmorency, 26, rue Jean-Mermoz, 8th. Tel.: 42 25 11 19. A favorite with internetional business executives, who appreciate its quiet atmosphere, personalized service and excellent fare. There's a "gourmet in e burry" menu at lunchtime.

Pharamond, 24, rue de la Grande-Truanderie, 1st. Tel.: 42 33 06 72. Tbis restaurant is some 135 years old. It retains its colored tiles and woodwork and serves, among other succulent dishes, tripe with a touch of Calvados. It's piece of Normandy in the old "belly" of La Rôtisserie du Beaujolais, 19, quai de la Tournelle, 5th. Tel.; 43 54 17 47. Claude Terrail has opened this Lyon-nais-style bistro near his famed Tour d'Argeot, It has many of the dishes associated with France's second city, notably hot saucisson, coq au vin de Beaujolais and excellent salads.

La Sologne, 164, av. Daumesnil, 12th. Tel.: 43 44 66 23. Specializes in game: birds, hares, rabbits and wild boar. Sauces are subtle.

Taillevent, 15, rue Lamennais, 8th. Tel.: 44 95 15 01. Don't look for mere cooking here, look for culinary art. You had better reserve before leaving home, for the widely spaced tables are nearly always full. Louis XVI furnishings add ele-gance to this 19th-century

La Tour d'Argent, 15, quai Tournelle, 5th. Tel.: 43 54 23 31. Cleude Terrail runs this famous establishment high over the Seine with friendliness and good humor. Duck is the celebrated specialty. Waiters are friendly and patient. Le Train Bleu, Gare de Lyon (first floor), 20, bd. Diderot, 12th. Tel.: 43 43 09 06. The Belle Epoque decor is dazzling. The restaurant was designed for the Paris Exposition of 1901. The food? Ah, the food! Yes.

Oakland's Old Pro Fails Against San Diego New Variety of Beijing Duck

By Tom Friend New York Times Service

SAN DIEGO — The Oakland Raiders ike their backup quarterbacks gray. George Blanda played almost to the ripe age of 50. and Vince Evans started on Monday night at the squearnish age of 40. But, as Al Davis earned, Evans is no Blanda.

Trailing by six points with four minutes eft on Monday evening, Evans got two hances to be an old-time hero — and failed miserably. One drive ended on an ncomplete fourth-down pass with two ninutes 15 seconds remaining, and a final trive ended with an interception with 56 econds left.

So, Evans acted his age, and the San Diego Chargers acted 1994. They defeated Oakland, 12-6, and injured the Raiders' opportunity to win the American Football Conference West. Oakland (8-4) will play host to Kansas City (10-2) on Sunday.

But San Diego, a Super Bowl team last season, finally had something to shout about. The Chargers, who had dropped six of their last seveo, managed four field goals on Monday night and made the Raiders yearn for Jeff Hostetler's better health.

The game actually may have boiled down to a 40-yard dash. With San Diego ahead by 9-3 early in the final quarter, Oakland's Harvey Williams took a handoff from his own seven-yard line and made a beeline to the Chargers' end zone. But just beyond midfield Dwayne Harper (who also intercepted Evans's last pass) dragged Williams down from behind. The 60-yard

Moments later, the linebacker Junior Seau hlitzed Evans, scared the quarterback into retreat and saw a defensive eod, Chris Mims, pry the ball loose. Mims recovered the fumble, setting up John Carney's 38yard field goal and increasing San Diego's lead to 12-6 with 4:02 remaining.

Aaron Hayden, a rookie from Tennessee, replaced Natrone Means as San Diego's backfield workaholic and he ran like a man beyond his years. His swerving, 15-yard gain in the second quarter was oot only a work of art, but it also got Carney away from his heating pad. Carney, who had back spasms an hour before game time, kicked a 23-yard field coal following Hayden's run, and the hargers took a 6-3 halftime lead.

crevice the San Diego defense gave him was the screen pass. All the short gains (10 like this of 14 passes for 99 yards in the first half) place." added up to one field goal - a 30-yarder by Jeff Jaeger in the first quarter.

Evans was constantly harassed by the defensive end Leslie O'Neal, and he almost has a seriously bruised left (nonthrowing) shoulder that left him dressed in denim on Monday night. Hostetler is in such agony, he may not return for next weekend's showdown with Kansas City.

Evans is the Raider alternative, but he apparently has the total trust of his Oakland gain led to a 26-yard field goal instead of a touchdown, and the Chargers still held a the National Football League, started touchdown, and the Chargers still held a the National Football League, started to the injured Hostetler, and the only seeing black quarterbacks in the league, before Sunday's game against period. After signing eight football cards, Favre told Bergman, "Give me a couple of good calls today.

But after one of 22 whistles on an afternoon filled with flags and fisticuffs, Favre told Bergman he wanted those autographs back.

Demystifying Saint Josephine for the French

By Katherine Knorr International Herald Tribune

PARIS — No one is a prophet in his own land, and so there was something particularly right about Jean-Claude Baker — American restaurateur né Jean-Claude Tronville in Burgundy - promoting with shocking American forthrightness to a bemused Parisian press the French translation of his biography of Josephine Baker.

"No city in the world has fallen in love the way Paris did with Josephine," Baker said. "I thought that the French, in their excessive and possessive love, I thought they would be interested today to discover the true story of the woman they adopted. Instead, it's 'You are destroying the myth.' 'In France, he said, "she's a saint they mummified."

A saint she was not. Josephine could be furny, generous and quite courageous, as she demonstrated in the wartime activities that would earn her the French Medal of the Resistance. Sbe was also magnificently amoral, unreliable in her business dealings, odious with the help, careless with other people's money, a mythomaniac of big-screen proportions and not a little cracked.

The story of Josephine Baker has been told, by herself and others, in so many different ways that it resembles the fantastic sets of 1920s nighclubs, all trompe l'oeil, papier-mâché and тіпого. After her death in 1975, Jean-Claude Baker, who had been late in her life her confidant, her majordomo and what the French would call her souffre-douleur, and who was spiritually adopted by her (and took her name), set out to find out a few facts about the girl from St. Louis who conquered Paris in 1925. The result, written with Chris Chase, was "Josephine: The Hungry Heart," published last year to critical acclaim in the United States and just out in France (A Contrario).

Josephine is a cultural icon, and a political one, too, in the charged racial atmosphere in the United States. She

"Josephine all her life was an angry woman." Baker said. "For 15 years she could never say Daddy. For 15 years she was too light for her mother.
And then when she joined [the show]
Shuffle Along, she was 16 years old, she was too dark. And she was still a nigger for white America."(Later she would burn her hair trying to straighten it, and burn her private parts while bathing with chlorine.)

She was practically illiterate but when she became, literally, an overnight sensation in Paris she proved a quick study. She wrecked her career and ruined herself more than once with impetuous decisions, but it can't be said people took advantage of her. "It was oot easy to exploit Josephine," Baker said.

She married often, not always legally, and famously adopted 12 children of various races, whom she called the Rainbow Tribe and raised. in a manner of speaking, in her château in the Périgord. "She was a mance, but it was another part.

She became a French star, but in America she was only a negro. When she played New York in 1936 in the Ziegfeld Follies, Time wrote: "In sex appeal to jaded Europeans of the jazzloving type, a Negro wench always had a head start, but to Manhattan theatregoers last week she was just a slightly buck-toothed Negro woman whose figure migh be matched in any nightcluh show, whose dancing and singing could be topped practically anywhere outside France.

She short-circuited her higgest U.S. success, in 1951, in a pointless

Baker's aim was not only to shed light on Josephine's background but also to go after some of the myths about Gay Paree.

The nightchubs of the '20s had a decadent brilliance that has never been replicated, and they attracted both royals and artists. But if they were classier and better attended than today's clip joints, nevertheless men didn't go there for the intellectual stimulation.

France was a haven for hlack American artists (as it was for homosexuals and other "misfits" fleeing a prudish and provincial America). From the moment the Revue Negre arrived at the Gare Saint-Lazare, its members knew they were in another world: "Evelyn Anderson told me, Jean-Claude, people received us so well in Paris, we almost forgot that we were colored people."

Still, the French attitude was less tolerance than a kind of indifference. a sense of privacy and distance that masquerades as live-and-let-live. American blacks were exotic and the music was great. They were also unthreatening.

'What is worse in the world. America, with slaves from Africa, what is worse, Europe, with a teeny country like Belgium, who stole the land of the black man in the name of pacification? To me both are the same," said Baker. "America for all its racism was the first to applaud
